大学英语六级（CET-6）

复习指南

核心词汇 · 写译话题词汇与短语 · 真题分类汇编

目标考试：2026 年 12 月

适用：SJTU 在校本科生自主备考

资料说明

- 本指南为个人备考资料汇总，真题题目、话题与词汇线索整理自公开网络资料（新东方四六级网、新东方在线、英语真题在线等），出处见附录“参考资料”。
- 真题内容仅用于个人学习、练习，版权归原命题机构所有；引用时已尽量精简并标注年份与出处。
- 最新考情请以全国大学英语四、六级考试委员会及其官方网站（cet.neea.edu.cn）发布为准。

使用说明

本指南共分九章，按“先词汇、后真题、再策略”的顺序编排，适合 9–12 月的冲刺复习：

- 第 1 章考试概况：题型、分值、时间分配与考场流程，先建立全局感。
- 第 2 章核心词汇与释义：按词性整理的高频词表、易混词辨析与固定搭配，适合每天定量默背。
- 第 3 章写译话题分类词汇与短语：写作、翻译两大部分的高频话题词汇、搭配与句式，全部按话题分类。
- 第 4–6 章真题分类汇编：写作、翻译、阅读与听力三个板块。题目均以英文原文呈现；汉译英保留中文原文（题型要求）。其中第 6 章收录 2023 年 6 月第三套的完整阅读真题（含答案），其余近年各套附直达链接。
- 第 7 章分题型解题策略：写作模板、翻译技巧、阅读与听力方法、时间分配。
- 第 8 章备考计划：以 2026 年 12 月考试为目标的十周计划表。
- 第 9 章参考资料：所有素材来源链接。

怎么用这份指南

- 词汇：第 2 章每天滚动复习 1–2 组；第 3 章的话题词汇在练写译时随时查阅，先“认脸”再“动用”。
- 真题：第 4–6 章按板块刷题。写作题目自己先计时写，再看第 7 章模板比对；翻译先自己译，再看参考译文。
- 策略：第 7 章不必通读，哪块错得多先看哪块。
- 建议把第 4–6 章打印出来，或对照本 PDF 在纸上作答；真题的“手感”是刷 PDF 之外的网站练不出来的。

1 考试概况

1.1 题型结构与分值

CET-6 总分 710 分，不设及格线，但通常以 425 分作为“通过”的参考标准；四级 425 分以上方可报考六级。笔试时长共 130 分钟，题型与分值如下：

部分	题型	题量	分值	时间 / 说明
写作	短文写作	1 题	106.5（15%）	30 分钟，150–200 词
听力	长对话	8 题	56.8（8%）	每题 7.1 分
	听力篇章	7 题	49.7（7%）	每题 7.1 分
	讲座 / 讲话	10 题	142（20%）	每题 14.2 分，占听力近六成
阅读	选词填空	10 题	35.5（5%）	每题 3.55 分，15 选 10
	长篇阅读（匹配）	10 题	71（10%）	每题 7.1 分
	仔细阅读	10 题	142（20%）	每题 14.2 分，2 篇
翻译	汉译英段落	1 题	106.5（15%）	与阅读共享 70 分钟，180–200 汉字

性价比排序（按“每分钟得分”估算）
仔细阅读（14.2 分/题）> 讲座讲话（14.2 分/题）> 长篇阅读（7.1 分/题）> 写作 ≈ 翻译（106.5 分/部分）> 选词填空（3.55 分/题）。复习时间紧张时，优先抓仔细阅读、翻译和写作这三块。

1.2 考场流程（以官方通知为准）

典型的下午考试流程如下，实际时间以考点安排为准：

时间	环节
14:40–15:00	考生入场、试音（耳机调频至考点频率）
15:00–15:10	发答题卡与试卷，填写个人信息，禁止提前答题
15:10–15:40	写作（答题卡 1）
15:40–16:10	听力（答题卡 1），听力结束立即收答题卡 1
16:15–17:25	阅读 + 翻译（答题卡 2）
17:25	考试结束，收答题卡 2 与试题册

三条“保命”规则

1. 听力必须边听边涂卡。听力播放结束后立刻收答题卡 1，没有单独涂卡时间。
2. 写作和听力共用答题卡 1；阅读和翻译共用答题卡 2 且共享 70 分钟，务必给翻译留出至少 25 分钟。
3. 答题顺序可以自定：推荐仔细阅读 → 翻译 → 长篇阅读 → 选词填空，或按个人习惯先写翻译再读文章，避免最后时刻手忙脚乱。

1.3 近年命题趋势（写作与翻译）

- 写作：以引言式议论文为主（给出首句或名言，续写成文），话题集中在个人成长、教育、科技与人际关系；“现象解释型”“问题解决型”“观点选择型”“谚语评述型”四种框架轮换出现。
- 翻译：全部为“中国主题”段落（180–200 汉字），文化类约占四成，社会经济类约三成半，地理生活类约两成半；近年趋向“传统文化 + 时代热点”的捆绑考查（如非遗 + 短视频、传统技艺 + 数字化保护）。
- 选词填空：15 个选项中名词 3–5 个、动词 5–7 个（含三单 / -ed / -ing 形式）、形容词 2–5 个、副词 2–3 个，选项词均为四类实词，且每个词只能使用一次。
- 听力：讲座 / 讲话（Section C）分值最重，背景多为社科、科普类话题；长对话以校园、职场、生活场景为主。

本章按词性整理六级高频词。词义只保留常考义项，先记核心义，再在真题语境中扩充。建议每天过 30–50 个，用“遮住释义自测”的方式滚动复习。

4.2 Task Types and Frameworks

1. Phenomenon-explanation (2016.06, 2018.06, 2019.06): describe the phenomenon, analyse its causes and effects, state your attitude.
2. Problem-solving (2016.12, 2018.12, 2021.12): state the problem, explain why it matters, propose two or three concrete measures.
3. Opinion-choice (2017.06): present both sides briefly, then state and defend your choice.
4. Proverb / saying (2017.12, 2020.07, 2020.09): explain the saying, illustrate it with an example, close with what you have learned.

Universal three-paragraph skeleton. Paragraph 1 (2–3 sentences): echo the given sentence, state your thesis. Paragraph 2 (5–7 sentences): two or three supporting points, each with a reason or an example, linked by "To begin with / In addition / What's more". Paragraph 3 (2–3 sentences): restate your view and end with a call for action or a prediction. Target length: 160–190 words; keep the given opening sentence exactly as it appears.

4.3 Sample Essays

Sample 1: Digital Literacy (2024.06, Set 1 style).

There is a growing awareness of the importance of digital literacy and skills in today's world. As technology reshapes nearly every aspect of life, the ability to use digital tools wisely has become as basic as reading and writing.

To begin with, digital skills determine how efficiently we learn. Students who can search, evaluate and organize online information are able to turn the Internet into a personal library, while those who cannot may easily get lost in a sea of unreliable content. In addition, digital literacy protects us from risks. Knowing how to manage privacy settings and recognize online fraud helps us avoid losing money or personal data. Finally, such skills are increasingly required in the workplace, where remote meetings, cloud documents and data analysis are routine tasks.

In conclusion, digital literacy is no longer optional but essential. It is high time that we took the initiative to sharpen these skills so that technology serves us rather than controls us.

Sample 2: Meeting Challenges (2020.12 style).

Why should students be encouraged to develop the ability to meet challenges? In an age of rapid change, the capacity to face difficulties calmly and creatively matters more than ever.

First, challenges are the best teachers. Each difficulty we overcome leaves us with new experience and stronger confidence, just as muscles grow only under resistance. Second, the ability to meet challenges prepares us for the future. Graduates today may change jobs several times, and only those who can adapt quickly will thrive. Moreover, facing challenges together builds teamwork: when students work on a difficult project, they learn to communicate, compromise and support each other.

Therefore, universities should create more opportunities—such as group projects and internships—for students to practise meeting challenges. What we gain in the process will benefit us throughout our lives.

Sample 3: A Sense of Responsibility (2019.12 style).

A sense of community responsibility plays an irreplaceable role in both personal growth and social progress. It means that we care about the common good and are willing to act for it.

On a personal level, taking responsibility gives life meaning. When we volunteer in a community, help an elderly neighbour, or protect the environment around us, we feel needed and valued. On a social level, responsibility is the glue of a harmonious society. If every citizen merely minds his own business, public problems such as waste and pollution will never be solved. Take the "Clean Plate Campaign" as an example: millions of small acts of self-discipline have greatly reduced food waste across the country.

In short, community responsibility is a virtue worth practising every day. As long as each of us contributes our part, our society will become a better place to live in.

4.4 Checklist Before Handing In

- Did I copy the given opening sentence exactly, without adding or dropping words?
- Is my essay 150–200 words, with one central idea per paragraph?
- Have I used at least three linking devices and two complex structures (a clause, a participle phrase, or an emphatic / inverted sentence)?
- Have I checked agreement, tense, singular vs. plural, and Chinese-style word order?

- Is the handwriting clear? Neat handwriting still earns impression points.

Item 1 (2025.12, Set 1): Respecting the Elderly

Source text (as printed):

> 尊老是中华民族的传统美德，深深植根于中国人的思想和行为中，是人们普遍遵守的行为规范和社会准则。在当今的中国，这种美德得到广泛传承。社会各界积极营造敬老助老的社会氛围，为老年人提供便利服务已成为社会共识，例如社区专门开设长者食堂，公共场所配置优先座位。政府还出台了一系列政策，为老年人的权益提供有力保障。尊老是社会和谐与发展的重要基石，有助于培育良好的社会氛围，推动整个社会文明进步。

Respecting the elderly is a traditional virtue of the Chinese nation, deeply rooted in the thoughts and behaviour of the Chinese people and widely observed as a code of conduct and a social norm. In today's China, this virtue is being carried forward on a broad scale. All sectors of society are working to create an atmosphere of respecting and helping the elderly, and providing convenient services for them has become a social consensus: communities have opened canteens especially for senior citizens, and priority seats are available in public places. The government has also introduced a series of policies that effectively protect the rights and interests of the elderly. Respecting the elderly is an important cornerstone of social harmony and development, helping to foster a sound social atmosphere and advance the civilization of the whole society.

Item 2 (2025.12, Set 2): Frugality

Frugality is a traditional virtue of the Chinese nation. In ancient China, productivity was low, and our ancestors knew well that the fruits of labour were hard-won, so they followed the idea of thrift. In today's world of abundant material wealth, the Chinese people still stick to a frugal way of life, which reflects a philosophy of rational consumption and respect for labour. In recent years, the Chinese government has stepped up efforts to build a conservation-oriented society: it advocates the "Clean Plate Campaign" to reduce food waste, promotes a simple, low-carbon lifestyle, advances resource recycling, and opposes excessive consumption. The development of such a conservation-oriented society has effectively boosted the high-quality growth of China's economy.

5.3 Translation Tips

- Topic first. Decide within ten seconds whether the passage is about culture, society or geography, then activate the matching word bank from Chapter 3.
- Proper nouns matter. Use standard spellings: The Analects of Confucius, the Yangtze River, the Qinghai-Tibet Plateau, the 24 Solar Terms, intangible cultural heritage, the Reform and Opening-up policy.
- Convert parts of speech. Chinese verbs often become English nouns: 他很喜欢读书 → He has a great love for reading.
- Prefer the passive when it fits. 被誉为 / 被认为 / 被列入 → be praised as / be regarded as / be listed as.
- Combine short clauses. Chinese chains short sentences; English prefers one main clause plus participles or attributive clauses.
- Do not translate word for word. Four-character phrases usually need explanation, not literal rendering (丰富多彩 → rich and varied).

This chapter follows the same principle as the previous two: everything below is printed in English, exactly as the questions appear in the examination papers. It contains (1) one complete recent paper as a full-length practice sample, and (2) an index with direct links to every other recent paper.

6.1 A Complete Recent Paper: June 2023, Set 3

The following is the complete Reading Comprehension section of the June 2023 examination (Set 3), reprinted for personal study. Answers are given at the end of the section. Timing suggestion: 40 minutes.

Part III Reading Comprehension (40 minutes)

Section A (One passage with ten blanks; choose one word for each blank from the word bank. Each word may be used only once.)

Directions: In this section, there is a passage with ten blanks. You are required to select one word for each blank from a list of choices given in a word bank following the passage. Read the passage through carefully before making your choices. Each choice in the bank is identified by a letter. Please mark the corresponding letter for each item on Answer Sheet 2 with a single line through the centre. You may not use any of the words in the bank more than once.

You might not know yourself as well as you think. According to a new study, people are _____(26) accurate judges of only some of their behaviors. While most previous studies on how well people know themselves have been done on long-term personality traits, this new study _____(27) how well people understand how they are acting from one moment to the next. Researchers asked participants to wear audio recorders that automatically _____(28) every 9.5 minutes between 7 a.m. and 2 a.m. to record 30 seconds of audio. These participants were then emailed surveys four times a day asking them to _____(29) how outgoing, agreeable, or conscientious they were during a particular hour of the day. The study used data from 248 participants, all of whom answered questions about their behavior for two _____(30) weeks and wore the audio device for one of those weeks.

Six laboratory assistants rated each participant's audio clips to see how their observations compared with people's _____(31) of themselves. The six assistants were generally in agreement with one another about how the people they were observing acted. Further, participants' ratings of their own behaviors agreed with observers' for how outgoing and how conscientious they were being. But the agreement between participants and outside observers was much smaller for agreeableness. Some of this _____(32) could be because the observers used only audio clips, and thus could not read _____(33) like body language, but there are _____(34) other explanations, as people should be able to hear when a participant is being kind versus being rude. The weak agreement between how participants thought they were acting and what observers heard could be because people would rather _____(35) rude behavior.

A) activated	F) deny	K) recall
B) articulates	G) discrepancy	L) relatively
C) assessment	H) probably	M) saturated
D) consecutive	I) probes	N) symptoms
E) cues	J) random	O) terminate

Section B (One passage with ten statements; match each statement with the paragraph it is derived from.)

Directions: In this section, you are going to read a passage with ten statements attached to it. Each statement contains information given in one of the paragraphs. Identify the paragraph from which the information is derived. You may choose a paragraph more than once. Each paragraph is marked with a letter. Answer the questions by marking the corresponding letter on Answer Sheet 2.

Why we need tiny colleges

A) We're experiencing the rebirth of smallness. Farmers markets, tiny homes, and brew pubs all exemplify our love of smallness. So do charter schools, coffee shops, and local bookstores. Small is often (but not always) more affordable, healthier, and sustainable, but its finest characteristic, the one that turns charm into love, is that going small allows us to be more fully who we are.

B) In higher education the trend is mostly in the opposite direction: Universities with 20,000 or 30,000 students are considered "mid-sized". The nation's largest university, Arizona State University, has 80,000 students on campus and aims to enroll another 100,000 students online. At the other end of the spectrum is a handful of colleges that have fewer than a hundred students on campus and no online courses: colleges such as Sterling College, Thomas More College of Liberal Arts, and Deep Springs College. These colleges are so small that they can only be called "tiny."

C) Tiny colleges focus not just on a young person's intellect, but on the young person as a whole. Equally important, tiny colleges ask, "How can education contribute to human flourishing and the well-being of the world?" And they shape a college experience to address that question. They replace concerns about institutional growth with attention to the growth of students as fully developed participants in their communities.

D) I've had the privilege of teaching at three different institutions of higher learning during my career—a small liberal arts college and two mid-sized public universities. I've also been profoundly disappointed in each of these institutions, and in many of my colleagues, especially when it comes to helping students and preparing them for the many responsibilities of adulthood. Administrators focus on the business of running a university, and most faculty focus on their scholarship and teaching their discipline. Little deliberate attention is given to how students mature as individuals and social beings.

E) Having just retired from teaching at a public university, I'm now returning to my hometown of Flagstaff, Arizona, to establish a tiny college—Flagstaff College. I'm convinced there's a need for another type of education, one devoted to helping students come into their own and into this beautiful and troubled world. Young people need an education that will provide them with meaning, hope, courage, and passion, as well as information and skills. Large institutions, I believe, are particularly ill-suited to this type of education.

F) There's no "best of" list when it comes to tiny colleges, at least not yet. But around the country people are creating new colleges that provide an alternative to small liberal arts colleges, large public universities, and online education.

G) With only 26 students, Deep Springs is the smallest college in the country and, quite likely, the most atypical (非典型的). Located on a working cattle ranch on the California-Nevada border, Deep Springs is a private, residential, two-year college for men, committed to educating students for "a life of service to humanity." Founded by the electricity tycoon (大亨) L. L. Nunn in 1917, Deep Springs' "curriculum" revolves around academics, labor, and self-governance. In addition to their courses, students are charged with running the 155-acre ranch and overseeing the functioning of the college. Students chair both the admissions and the curriculum committees.

H) "Living in close community with one's teachers and fellow students, and being forced to take on adult responsibilities, makes for one's growth as a person,"says William Hunt, who graduated last year. "To exist for very long in a community like that, you have to get over the question of whether you're sufficiently talented or principled and get started worrying about how you can stretch yourself and your peers, how much you can manage to learn with them."

I) Sterling College, in Craftsbury Common, Vermont, is also very small-fewer than 100 students. Unlike Deep Springs, Sterling focuses its curriculum on environmental and social justice issues, but like Deep Springs it places a high value on personal responsibility and manual labor. According to its catalog, a college education at Sterling combines "rigorous academics, roll-up-your-sleeves challenges, and good old hard work."

J) The average tuition at a small liberal-arts college is $30,000 to $40,000 a year, not including the cost of living on campus, as compared to $8,000 to $10,000 a year for tuition alone at a public university. Of the tiny colleges, only Deep Springs doesn't charge tuition or room and board; students pay only for books and the cost of traveling to and from college. If tiny schools are to become a player on the higher education scene, they will need to find a way to be truly affordable.

K) Doing so may not be that difficult so long as they do not pattern themselves too closely on existing norms. We've come to believe that a good college should have many academic programs and excellent facilities, posh (豪华的) dorms, an array of athletic programs, and a world-class student activity center. Imagine a good college without a climbing wall! We also have accepted the idea that college presidents, and their many vice-presidents, should be paid like their counterparts in the business world and that higher education requires an elaborate, up-to-date technology infrastructure. All of this drives up the cost of education.

L) The "trick" to making tiny colleges affordable, if that's the right word, is simplicity. At its core, education is a human-to-human interaction. Reflecting on his own college education, President Garfield once commented that an ideal college would consist of nothing more than the legendary teacher Mark Hopkins on one end of a log and a student on the other. The economics of a tiny college, in other words, might be similar to that of a tiny house. Because it is small, a tiny house costs less to build and less to furnish, insure, and maintain. But the economic benefits of a small house don't end there. Tiny homes discourage homeowners from buying stuff that they really don't need, because there's no place to put it.

M) I'm a late convert to the idea of tiny colleges, and I fully understand the need for many diverse types of educational institutions. Academic research and job training are important, but tiny colleges aren't suited for either. The educational needs of a complex society are themselves complex, and no single model can meet all of these needs. But I'm now convinced there's an educational need that's now going almost completely unmet: namely, the need to help young people transition into adulthood. Tiny colleges can do this better than any other type of educational institution.

N) The ultimate justification for a tiny college is the conviction that each of us comes into our full humanity by close interaction with those who know and care for us, and that one of the basic purposes of higher education is social. Although we give lip service to the idea that a college education will make us better people, when all's said and done, we think of higher education primarily in economic terms. We've come to think of higher education as a means to make a living rather than make a life. We've also come to see higher education as a private good rather than a public one. Tiny colleges are not the answer to all of our educational requirements, but they're an answer to one of our most basic educational necessities: the need to produce thoughtful, engaged, and compassionate human beings.

36. One tiny American college situated on a cattle farm is devoted to educating students to serve mankind throughout their lives.

37. Much to the author's disappointment, the three institutions of higher learning where she taught largely ignore students' growth as social beings.

38. Tiny colleges must be made affordable in order to play a role in higher education.

39. According to a recent graduate from a tiny college, living together with faculty and fellow students is conducive to a student's growth as a person.

40. Rather than going small, most American universities are trying to go big.

41. In a certain tiny college, rigorous academic work and traditional manual labor are integrated.

42. Tiny colleges focus on educating students to become well-rounded citizens instead of seeking their own expansion.

43. The essence of education lies in the interaction between people.

44. After her retirement, the author has decided to set up a tiny college in her hometown.

45. Tiny colleges are justified as it is believed that our growth into full humanity comes through interaction with people near and dear to us.

Section C (Two passages; choose the best answer to each question.)

Directions: There are 2 passages in this section. Each passage is followed by some questions or unfinished statements. For each of them there are four choices marked A), B), C) and D).You should decide on the best choice and mark the corresponding letter on Answer Sheet 2 with a single line through the centre.

Passage One

Questions 46 to 50 are based on the following passage.

If you're someone who has turned to snacking on junk food more in the pandemic (大流行病), you're not alone. Investigative reporter Michael Moss says processed food is engineered to hook you, not unlike alcohol, cigarettes, or other harmful substances. His 2013 book, Salt Sugar Fat, explored food companies'aggressive marketing of those products and their impact on our health. In his new book, Hooked, Moss updates the food giants'efforts to keep us eating what they serve, and how they're responding to complaints from consumers and health advocates.

Processed food is inexpensive, it's legal, and it's everywhere. Companies'advertising is cueing us to remember those products and we want those products constantly. So the food environment is one of those key things that makes food even more problematic for so many people. Memory, nostalgia (怀旧) in particular, plays a big role in the foods we crave. Soda companies discovered that if they put a soda in the hands of a child when they're at a ball game with their parents, that soda will forever be associated with that joyous moment. Later in life, when that child wants to experience a joyous moment, they're going to think of soda. Many people seek comfort in the snacks they remember from childhood.

Moss examines the way companies capitalize on our memories, cravings and brain chemistry to keep us snacking.

One of the reasons I came to think that some of these food products are even more powerful, more troublesome than drugs can be is memory. What we eat is all about memory. And we begin forming memories for food at a really early age. And we keep those memories for a lifetime. Knowing this, the food industry spends lots of time trying to shape the memories that we have for their products. One of the features of addiction that scientists studying drug addiction discovered back in the 1990s was that the faster a substance hits the brain, the more apt we are as a result to act impulsively. There's nothing faster than food in its ability to hit the brain. For Moss, this puts the notion of "fast food" in an entirely new light as this isn't limited to fast food chains—almost 90%of food products in grocery stores are processed foods. Everything in the industry is about speed, from manufacturing to packaging.

Overall, Moss outlines the industry's dependence on making their products inexpensive, super delicious, and incredibly convenient for consumers. Now that more and more people care about what they put in their bodies and are wanting to eat healthier, these companies are finding it really difficult to meet that new demand because of their own addiction to making these convenience foods.

46. In what way does Michael Moss think processed food is comparable to alcohol and cigarettes?

A) They are all addictive.

B) They are all necessary evils.

C) They are all engineered to be enjoyed.

D) They are all in increasingly great demand.

47. What does the author say plays a key role in the foods we crave?

A) The food environment.

B) Aggressive marketing.

C) Convenience.

D) Memory.

48. What do food companies do to capitalize on consumers'association with their food products?

A) They strive to influence how consumers remember their products.

B) They attempt to use consumers'long-term memories to promote addiction.

C) They try to exploit consumers'memories for their products as early as possible.

D) They endeavor to find what consumers remember about their products.

49. How does the food industry operate from manufacturing to packaging, according to Moss?

A) Placing the idea of fast food in an entirely new light.

B) Setting no limit to the number of fast food chains.

C) Focusing on how quickly the work is done.

D) Prioritizing the quality of their products.

50. Why are companies finding it difficult to satisfy consumers'demand for healthier food products?

A) They think speed of production outweighs consumers'health.

B) They believe their industry would perish without fast foods.

C) They have to strike a balance between taste and nutrition.

D) They are hooked on manufacturing convenience foods.

Passage Two

Questions 51 to 55 are based on the following passage.

Chimpanzees (黑猩猩), human beings'closest animal relatives, share up to 98%of our genes. Yet humans and chimpanzees lead very different lives. Fewer than 300,000 wild chimpanzees live in a few forested corners of Africa today, while humans have colonized every corner of the globe. At more than 7 billion, human population dwarfs that of nearly all other mammals—despite our physical weaknesses.

What could account for our species'incredible evolutionary successes?

One obvious answer is our big brains. It could be that our raw intelligence gave us an unprecedented ability to think outside the box, innovating solutions to thorny problems as people migrated across the globe.

But a growing number of cognitive scientists and anthropologists (人类学家) are rejecting that explanation. They think that, rather than making our living as innovators, we survive and thrive precisely because we don't think for ourselves. Instead, people cope with challenging climates and ecological contexts by carefully copying others.

In a famous study, psychologists Victoria Horner and Andrew Whiten showed two groups of test subjects- children and chimpanzees—a mechanical box with a treat inside. In one condition, the box was opaque, while in the other it was transparent. The experimenters demonstrated how to open the box to retrieve the treat, but they also included the irrelevant step of tapping on the box with a stick.

Oddly, the children carefully copied all the steps to open the box, even when they could see that the stick had no practical effect. That is, they copied irrationally: Instead of doing only what was necessary to get their reward, children slavishly imitated every action they'd witnessed.

Of course, that study only included three-and four-year-olds. But additional research has shown that older children and adults are even more likely to mindlessly copy others'actions, and infants are less likely to over- imitate—that is, to precisely copy even impractical actions.

By contrast, chimpanzees in the study only over-imitated in the opaque condition. In the transparent condition—where they saw that the stick was mechanically useless—they ignored that step entirely. Other research has since supported these findings.

When it comes to copying, chimpanzees are more rational than human children or adults.

Where does the seemingly irrational human preference for over-imitation come from?Anthropologist Joseph Henrich points out that people around the world rely on technologies that are often so complex that no one can learn them rationally. Instead, people must learn them step by step, trusting in the wisdom of more experienced elders and peers.

So the next time you hear someone arguing passionately that everyone should embrace nonconformity and avoid imitating others, you might laugh a little bit. We're not chimpanzees, after all.

51. What might explain humans'having the largest population of almost all mammals?

A) They are equipped with raw strength for solving the most challenging problems.

B) They cope with the outside world more effectively than their animal relatives.

C) They possess the most outstanding ability to think.

D) They know how to survive everywhere on earth.

52. What accounts for humans'evolutionary successes according to a growing number of cognitive scientists and anthropologists?

A) They are better at innovating solutions.

B) They thrive through creative strategies.

C) They are naturally adaptive to ecological contexts.

D) They meet challenges by imitating others carefully.

53. What does the author think is odd about the findings of the study by Victoria Horner and Andrew Whiten?

A) Children irrationally imitated every action of the experimenters.

B) Chimpanzees could tell the transparent box from the opaque one.

C) Chimpanzees could retrieve the treat more quickly than children did.

D) Children omitted the step of tapping on the box with a stick to open it.

54. What is anthropologist Joseph Henrich's explanation for the human preference for copying?

A) It originates in the rationality of people around the world.

B) It stems from the way people learn complex technologies.

C) It results from people distrusting their own wisdom.

D) It derives from the desire to acquire knowledge step by step.

55. What point does the author want to emphasize when he says "We're not chimpanzees"?

A) It is arguable whether everyone should avoid imitation.

B) It is characteristic of human beings to copy others.

C) It is desirable to trust in more knowledgeable peers.

D) It is naive to laugh at someone embracing nonconformity.

避坑清单

- 首句若已给出，必须照抄，不得改写、翻译或另起一句。
- 字数控制在 150–200 词，超过或不足都会扣分；段落不要少于三段。
- 避免三种低级错误：主谓一致、时态混用、名词单复数。
- 不要通篇堆砌“I think”；用 From my perspective / It is my belief that 等替换。

7.2 翻译：五步流程与五类技巧

五步流程（建议 25–30 分钟）

1. 通读全文，判断话题类别（文化 / 社会 / 地理），圈出专有名词与难点词。
2. 拆句：把中文长句按“意群”切成短句，标出主从句关系。
3. 直译主干：先保证“主谓宾”正确，再补修饰成分。
4. 升级表达：替换低级词、调整语序、适当合句、必要时改被动。
5. 检查：时态、单复数、冠词、拼写、漏译。

五类技巧

技巧	示例
词类转换	他很喜欢读书 → He has a great love for reading.（动词转动词性名词）
语序调整	他昨天在公园遇见了朋友 → He met his friend in the park yesterday.
语态转换	这部小说被翻译成多种语言 → The novel has been translated into many languages.
拆分合并	中文多短句 → 英语用从句、分词、同位语合并

技巧	示例
固定表达	“随着……的发展” → with the development of；“人们普遍认为” → It is widely believed that …

翻译高频“官方译法”提醒

- 二十四节气 → the 24 Solar Terms；国粹 → the quintessence of Chinese culture（不要译作 national treasure）。
- 朝代一律音译 + Dynasty：the Tang Dynasty。
- “位于” → be located in / lie in；“流经” → flow through；“追溯到” → date back to。
- 数字与年代：公元前 → BC；公元后 → AD；“亿” → hundred million；注意 billion = 十亿。

7.3 阅读理解：分题型打法

1. 选词填空（建议 8–10 分钟）：先给 15 个选项标词性、分四组；再逐空判词性、看搭配、比词义；最后通读验证。记不住的不纠结，一空 3.55 分，性价比最低，可放到最后做。
2. 长篇阅读（建议 15 分钟）：先读题干圈关键词（人名、数字、专有名词），再按段落扫读定位，重点关注同义替换；一题一勾，防止重复使用。
3. 仔细阅读（建议 30–35 分钟）：每篇 8–10 分钟，先题后文、定位作答；主旨题看首尾段，态度题看形容词，推理题注意“同义改写即答案”。

7.4 听力：三个动作

1. 预读：利用题目间隙读选项，圈出选项差异词（数字、地点、态度）。
2. 抓信号词：but, however, in fact, actually, the most important thing is — 转折与强调之后往往是答案。
3. 边听边涂：听力一结束就收答题卡 1，答案必须随时填涂。

7.5 考场时间总方案

时段	任务	要点
15:10–15:40	写作	30 分钟一气呵成，留 5 分钟检查
15:40–16:10	听力	边听边涂卡，S1 结束后不再翻看
16:15–16:40	仔细阅读（前 4–5 题）	先做分值最高的部分，进入状态
